Introduction

This is especially true of language learners trying to figure out how to learn English, which has the largest vocabulary of any language in the world. Learning vocabulary takes patience, but you can speed up the process if you take a methodical, scientific approach. Too many people just pore over lists of words and try to memorize them, when they could instead learn new words trough use.

Even though, remembering new words is the most significant part of learning a language effectively. Each learner has different style about using and memorizing dictionary. Working with new words helps us being confident in our speech and, writing grammarly in contexts. Tutors should organize a new subject for EFL like a ‘Memory Techniques’. In this subject, learners can work with different techniques such as easy and complex. Some learners prefer to learn by cards, some students prefer to memorize by recording voice, others want to remember from daily situations or by highlithing new words in books. Every situation effect on developing vocabulary skill. Curriculum which is about the best ways of memorizing new vocabulary in English should be complete every detail of remembering tactics on the other hand, should be clear, evident and obvious for learners. Most of the EFL can learn new words by practical way. Because of this position, some of learners do not need theoretical knowledges and tutorials.

Main body.

In this article some main points and effective ways are given to learning new words.

1.Keep a dictionary and thesaurus handy

Use whatever versions you prefer in print, software or online. A good quality dictionary is one hundred times better than google translate and electronic ones are quick! When you uncover a new word, look it up in the dictionary to get both its pronunciation and its meaning. Next, go to the thesaurus and find similar words and phrases and their opposites (synonyms and antonyms).

2.Build your own dictionary

It is a very good idea to write down the new words you discover. Just by writing them down you will start to recognize the words when you read. Plus, keeping a dictionary of all your new words will give you the confidence to learn even more words, especially when you can see how many new words you have already learnt.

Writing is the memorizing two times. If you write daily academic words which you listen on the way or at lesson and during conversation with your friends, when you look at you remember easily and you can use them in contexts without challengings. You should give and example sentences for new words in your dictionary. Because a great deal of words have different meanings and they will be adjective in some sentences, in contrast , they can be adverb another contexts. By writing example sentences in dictionary, we can differ them obviously.

3.Learn a word a day

Using a word a day calendar, a website or develop your own list of words to learn. This is a great technique many people use to learn new words. Do not feel you must learn a new word every day. You can write a new word in your teacher`s speech daily. Because, every day you learn new topic, of course, new topic will be full of vocabularies. If you listen a new word in songs, subtitles of movies, BBC podcast, news in TV, fiction or reference books, exactly you should write them on your notebook and learn the meanings of them punctually. This is one of the best way to memorizing vocabularies.

4.Play some games

Word games that challenge you and help you discover new meanings and new words are a great tool for expanding your vocabulary. Examples include crossword puzzles, anagrams, word jumble, Scrabble and Boggle. Kahoot and Quiz bots can create different interesting games related to new words. For example, you can match new words with their definitions, on the another way, you can explain words by mnemonics. We have various games to memorizing words. You can create role play by participating new words.

5. Engage in conversation

Simply talking with other people can help you learn discover new words. As with reading, once you hear a new word, remember to jot it down so that you can study it later and then slowly add the new word to your vocabulary.

You hold the key to better vocabulary. By using the tips from this article, you should be well on your way to discovering and learning new words to expand your vocabulary and strengthen your use of the English language. Finally, remember that you must practice putting your new words into your writing and speaking so that you continue to remember them. Good luck!

6. Use flashcards (in moderation)

To use flashcards or not to use flashcards? Some teachers say they are an effective way to learn small facts in bulk. Others say that learning words with flashcards means removing them from their contexts and often causes important layers of meaning to be lost.

We think that flashcards are very useful tools. If you are just starting out, they certainly have a place in your language- learning toolkit. This said, make sure to practice whatever words you learn with flashcards in different situation as soon as you can. For example, if you learn lots of food words, try reading a recipe in English too to see how they are used in practice.

Tinycards

Memrise

Word Power Lite

Quizlet

For best results, make your own sets rather than relying on pre-created ones. This way, you can learn words which you yourself have come across in your other English language work and so will be familiar with their context from the beginning. The making process will also help you learn the words quicker.

7. Use mnemonics

Mnemonics are a memorization technique that many people swear by. A mnemonic is a strange image or a story that learners make to help them remember a word and its meaning. For example, if you were trying to remember the Spanish verb, “to fit” – “caber”- you might picture a man trying to fit a bear into the passenger seat of a cab (or taxi) . in that bizarre mental image, you have the two sounds you need to remember “cab” and “ber” , along with the meaning of the word “ to fit”.

The stranger and sillier the image, the more likely it is to stick in your brain. Mnemonics require a little bit of imagination to come up with, but they are astonishingly effective!

Conclusion.

The most important thing that you will need to remember words in English is the right attitude and to put in the work.

Of course, you should keep track of the new words you are learning. Write them down on paper, in an app, on flashcards -whatever you like best. If you can build in spaced repetition, the more the better.

But there is not really a magic system. None of the approaches above is “right” or “erong”. You should find something that works for you and use it consistently. Try experimenting with a few and see what has the best results.

At the end of the day, you need to be exposed to new words and it is best if that is done in context. But you are unlikely to remember a word if you just hear the word once. All of the science says you need to see it repeatedly.

So find a method of repeating and re-exposing yourself to the words you come across and then use that method consistently. If you do that, you will find you are much better able to remember vocabulary in English.
