Abstract: This article is about the role of English in industry. Explains the reason for the spread of English in Great Britain and the history of globalization of English

Key words: Great Britain, globalization, spread of language, communications, colonial areas, several countries, started to trade

Globalization has led to the dominance of English as the language of education and business in several countries. This places people without proficiency in English at a disadvantage, raising concerns related to inequality.

The first and most important reason for the spread of English is the British Empire. Before nearly a quarter of the world was colonized by the British Empire, English was spoken only by the British. But when they started to trade, colonize with places like Asia and Africa, they naturally started the spread of English.

One of the primary benefits of including English as a global language is that it bridges the communication gap between countries, uniting people of diverse ethnicities, cultural backgrounds, and races around the world.3-fev, 2023

But in global terms, the spread of English began in 16th century, when the language became a tool of imperial expansion, and end up by gaining a special place in the history of a significant number of countries. This was what happened in USA, but also in other colonial areas.

In general, English language history is split into three sections: Old English, Middle English and Modern English. Whilst linguists and scholars do hotly contest these labels, and exactly when or how each period begins, we can see a distinct change in the language over these three phases.

Let us look at some real-world examples of globalization in different sectors to understand why it is such an important concept in economics.

Globalization in business.

Globalization in Food.

Globalization in Culture.

Globalization in Technology.
