The developmental goal of teaching a foreign language includes the following: a) the components of speech ability are listening, perception, noticing, distinguishing language phenomena, logical expression of thought, etc.; b) mental processes related to speech activity: thinking, memory, attention, imagination, analysis and synthesis, generalization; c) ability to communicate: emotion, eloquence, approachability, politeness, initiative during conversation, appropriate use of gestures, etc.; d) internal and external motivation, interest and enthusiasm for learning a foreign language and the country where the language is being studied, its people, culture, customs, etc.; e) independent work during education and preparation of students for independent education after completing education[1].

The main part.

The role of electronic dictionaries for the acquisition of vocabulary for high school students is incomparable. In the electronic dictionary, words are pronounced directly as a set of sounds, not through a graphic representation. When working with such dictionaries, it is easy to remember words and they are stored in long-term memory.

It is necessary to be able to use language material to express an idea or to understand the expressed idea in a speech. To achieve this, it is necessary to establish a strong and flexible connection between the means of language and the content of the speech, in the words of S. Setlin, an association.

Language skills are formed as part of speaking skills. The formation of grammatical skills is a three-stage methodical process: 1) the distribution stage consists of explaining (presenting a speech sample), explaining and performing preliminary grammatical operations. 2) doing grammar exercises. This stage focuses mainly on skill building. 3) the stage of using the grammatical phenomenon in speech activities [3]. From what has been said, it is clear that grammar serves to develop skills, not to absorb knowledge.

A person who does not know his mother tongue cannot learn a foreign language perfectly. It is good that you have started learning English grammar, but it will be easier for you to learn foreign language grammar if you study Uzbek grammar first or repeat your existing knowledge. Despite the fact that Uzbek and English grammars are very different in terms of structure, origin and learning, the basic grammar concepts used in language learning are the same in these two languages. Therefore, it is possible to better understand English grammar by comparing, contrasting, and combining common concepts. The better you know your mother tongue, the better you understand its grammar rules, the easier it is to learn English grammar.

Learn with a friend.

It is much more effective to learn by competing with someone or by sharing ideas than learning alone. Keep in touch with your English grammar friend as much as possible. Have frequent question-and-answer sessions with him on grammar topics. If you do not have a close acquaintance or friend to study English grammar with, such a partner can be your peers studying at local language centers, students at the university you are studying, and in the most difficult cases, users of English language learning sites on the Internet. , for example, among the members of the English language learning groups on the odnoklassniki site you can find a partner to study with. The wanted always finds the opportunity!

Don't be afraid to make mistakes!

Did you know that learning grammar is all about gaining understanding by constantly making mistakes and correcting them? If you don't know, you will feel bad when you make mistakes when doing exercises on one or another topic during grammar study, you will lose your motivation to learn, and as a result, you will not spend more energy on studying. you can spend it regretting your mistakes. And when you know that learning by making mistakes is fun, useful and memorable, the above bad feelings will never stop you! Never be afraid to make mistakes when learning English grammar. Try to express your opinion on the topic, even if it is possible to make a mistake.

Summary.

In conclusion, English grammar may seem like the most difficult set of rules to learn at first glance. But, believe me, the real truth is not like that! As difficult, confusing and boring as English grammar may seem, it can become one of the simplest and easiest things in the world for you to learn in seconds. Only your desire is enough for this!

Learning English is very easy. It's easier than you think! It's easier than they tell you! The important thing is that you believe it. You will be able to learn English completely.
